BACKGROUND

TWG was retained by Potlatch Fund to facilitate a convening called Securing the Sustainability of Tribal Journeys. Securing facilitators outside Potlatch Fund allowed Potlatch Fund staff the flexibility to actively listen to participants without the work of running the session and offered a separation from being the leading voice in the room. Potlatch Fund recognizes that this conversation of sustainability must be led from within the people intricately connected to the functioning of Canoe Journey.

Potlatch Fund secured funding for participants to be able to attend the convening from:

- Anonymous Foundation – Provided funding for lodging, meals, mileage support and facilitation.
- The Suquamish Tribe – Provided funding for facilitation and hosted the Community Dinner.
- Port Madison Enterprises – Provided support for lodging, meals and transportation.
- The Whitener Group – Provided support for facilitation.
- American Friends Service Committee – Provided additional mileage support.

Though Potlatch Fund staff selected the participants, the intent of the session was to fill the recent perceived gap in the tribal journey planning process, which was the need for someone to bring together different stakeholders from tribal journeys (skippers, grant writers, funders, pullers, ground crew, canoe families and others) and begin a conversation about the sustainability of tribal journeys. More specifically, what do the people who are closely involved with the Canoe Journey think is the most beneficial way(s) to make sure Journey continues in the manner preferred by all the different stakeholders?

Potlatch Fund outlined to the facilitators that through introducing a particular funder to Tribal Canoe Journey, a one-time gift was given to Potlatch Fund by this funder to support an initial convening. Potlatch Fund was and remains very clear that the conversation had to be open-ended without any agenda (hidden or obvious) as to the outcome. Potlatch Fund wanted to design a process that would be set up by the facilitators and content driven by the participants without any preconceived idea of the session outcomes. As directed by Potlatch Fund, the facilitators guided this convening with the understanding that this would be the first and only time that Potlatch Fund would organize the conversation and the participants of the group would be responsible for any next steps, if any.

With this in mind, TWG facilitators designed a session outline with the understanding that the conversation would determine the direction. TWG facilitators adapted the flow and structure of the discussions based on feedback from the group and where the group seemed to be heading after each session.

PRE-CONVENING DATA COLLECTION

To help TWG gain a better understanding of where the group stood on some preliminary questions, TWG designed a survey using a tool called SurveyMonkey. Pre-collected data gives us, as facilitators, a glimpse into the general opinions of the participants and helps us decide the activities and exercises we use to generate rich discussion. TWG offers the use of our SurveyMonkey tool to participants in the future if there is interest in gathering more data on the Tribal Canoe Journey. (Note: data from the survey is included in Day 1 of the Convening, which is addressed below).

CONVENING

The following narrative is from the perspective of the Facilitators.

DINNER & PRELIMINARY INTRODUCTIONS

(Sunday, September 28th)

The convening kicked off with dinner at the Suquamish Clearwater Resort. At dinner we had approximately 31 participants, which was 76% of total attendance.
During introductions we asked participants to identify their name, affiliation and what they hoped to get out of the next two days. Based on the initial introductions and information shared, we adjusted the structure and content to fit the expectations voiced in the room.
DAY 1 – PAST & PRESENT

(Monday, September 29th)

Attendance: 41 participants

INTRODUCTIONS & MOMENTS OF TRUTH/GIFTS

During introductions, we asked people to share their moment of truth and again their name and affiliation. We defined moments of truth as: The stories of how you know your values are real to you, where they came from and how you learned them, and the intimate and profound personal experiences—glorious or traumatic—that shaped your self-awareness.¹

At the beginning of this exercise, there was some push back from group about the length of introductions and if we needed to spend the time on introductions again. Other members of the group voiced their opinions that they thought that it was still an important piece and the majority of the group wanted to continue the exercise. As facilitators, we know that this conversation around personal moments of truth helps the group delve into their core values and if core values can be kept in the center of our consciousness, they will drive the vision and success of any effort. We captured the core values on flip charts at the front of the room and emphasized those values that were repeated as we went around the room to each person. Also, it is important that introductions are used at the beginning of any group conversation to make space in the room for those who might not speak up in a large group if the space is not given. In addition, there were people that were not in attendance at dinner the night before who needed to actively engage with the group.

The top 10 values in the room (listed in order of most mentions) were:

Teachings, Healings, Family, Stories, Belonging, Youth, Sharing & Giving, Reciprocity, Awakening, Revitalization

COMMON GROUND & SHARED HISTORIES

In this session, we presented the survey data collected from the participants prior to the convening to demonstrate the common ground and potential divergent views of Canoe Journey in the room. We also asked Jeff Smith from the American Friends Service Committee to share a history of the Guidebook that has been published for a number of Tribal Journeys and the purpose of the book. As a final exercise, we explained the purpose of the timeline on the back wall of the room, which was to begin mapping the history of Canoe Journey with all of the knowledge in the room. We asked for the group’s help in filling in the gaps in information, dates/times of items of note and anything else of importance. When we took a break for lunch, Frank Brown from Bella Bella offered a video and presentation on the successful Journey to Bella Bella in 2014.

SURVEY DATA COLLECTED PRIOR TO CONVENING
In the third session, we set up a group exercise to begin the larger conversation of sustainability for the Tribal Canoe Journey. In our experience, smaller groups allow for richer conversations and makes space for all voices to be heard. We were very aware of the knowledge and wisdom in the room, which we wanted to tap into and pull into the forefront of the conversation. We asked each group to make a list of the top 5 things working well and the top 5 things needing improvement. Each group had the opportunity to report out to the whole group on their respective top 5 lists. The following two graphics show the main ideas from all of the group sessions.
The conclusion of Day 1 Community Dinner hosted by the Suquamish Tribe at their House of Awakened Culture. Everyone relaxed and enjoyed the food, drumming and singing from the participants.
COST VISION FOR THE FUTURE
DAY 2 – THE FUTURE

(Tuesday, September 30th)

36 participants

VISIONING FOR THE FUTURE

As we worked through the content and notes generated from Day 1, it was apparent to the facilitators that the group was ready to jump into generating action plans. Using the top 5 lists from each group, we showed the top five concepts that were working well within Canoe Journey and the top five items that needed improvement for Canoe Journey to move toward sustainability (graphics showing top 5 lists above). After a larger group discussion where the top five issues needing improvement were reassessed and defined, we again broke the group into smaller working groups based on their interest in the topics. The groups were:

- Costs
- Youth Engagement
- Safety
- Environmental Impacts
- Protocol

The next exercise was the visioning for the future where we asked each group to envision what their topic looked like five years into the future (or 7 generations, or whatever they felt was appropriate to their group) at Canoe Journey. The following pictures are the respective group report outs on the Visioning Exercise in the following order: 1) Costs; 2) Youth Engagement; 3) Safety; 4) Environmental Impacts; and 5) Protocol.
SAFETY VISION FOR THE FUTURE

- Off-season training
- Prevention & planning
- Camp safety (food handling, conduct, bullying, abuse, etc.)
- Off-water safety (highways)
- Support boat (conduct, rescue)
- Navigation
- Canoe: life jackets, cold water training, coast guard

I am not sure who came up with that kind of list you had. or if others were invited and could not attend but many key people were missing. We had at one time an inter tribal canoe society made of up of some key players. Many of the cultural people were not there. I did leave a list of names that i thought should have been there. there are more but i left a few. the Canadian i felt were not represented.

The people that were there were the ones who mostly show up for Skippers meetings. We need input from tribal council as well.

All the Tribes/First Nations who participate in the tribal journeys. Would be nice to gather us all together even if they did not apply for the Potlatch Grants needs to be canoe people, organizers, skippers, participants. not just grant writers. Not people that want to take everything to ATNI

Question 5: Who needs to be included in next conversation about journeys? (Specific names and/or groups). (Responses are exactly as written by respondents).

Youth.

Claudia Kaufman, whomever donates that's not a Tribal funder, Pick out three communities that regularly receive canoe landings-ask for input as to impact (good and bad).

Tribal Journey Cultural Leaders

I would not come to another session like this. I took 2 days off my job to be there and i felt like i was rushed rushed rushed the entire time. This topic is again for skippers. And we cannot always change the course of the way things happen. TJ may be getting to big and I see it as a fad right now and so far from what it used to be. SO these smaller trips planned out for next year may be back culture to the pullers and ground crews. I would say right now that at least half of the people who go to tribal journeys are not participating other than tagging along. They are no help to pullers or ground crew.

All of the tribes/Bands who travel on the journeys.

| Question 8: Is there any other feedback you would like to share from the convening? |
| (Responses are exactly as written by respondents). |
| I wish that participants would refrain from saying that pullers get all the attention. I would be interested in knowing how many of the participants pull in the canoes. | it was a great start! thank you.

Even though you stated you didn't have an agenda, some people still said this convening was about "Potlatch Fund getting what they need." which was fairly negative thing, counter productive. Facilitators were great but a little apologetic. Next time, someone who is familiar with canoe journey would be better.

We know the issues. We need a more specific follow-up agenda, meaningful measurable objectives, a positive move forward, however small.

from the words of our great leader that recently passed on... of which we should have honored with a moment of silence before we started this meeting out of respect for our great Chief and leader.....

I loved the dialogue and am looking forward to the next step we will be taking to help assist in the future funding of canoe journeys.

We accomplished the most on the second day. The sharing of stories on the first day was very positive but I think many of us felt we could have shortened that and focused of the identification of problems/solutions. It was still very very positive!

I was on the fence about the whole canoe journey, due to some bad apples. I did not put as much effort towards fund raising prior to this meeting. Having said that, I am totally on board, and am glad to have had the opportunity to attend. I have taken away with me, a better view of the journey as a whole. I my self, have been involved with canoes for 38 years of my life... and will continue to be involved with the canoe way of life.

It was a good start and we need follow through.
It was TGW pleasure to facilitate this group and we are excited to see what the next steps taken by the group and individuals are. We know Tribal Journeys will continue to thrive. When there are so many people dedicated and passionate people involved there really is no other possible outcome.
